Enrollment Confirmation

At least two weeks before the class, Sielox will email a notice as to whether or not the course is being presented. Once Sielox emails confirmation that the class is being held, all POs will be processed. Any participant who cancels after that time, or is a no show, and cannot provide a replacement, will be billed a $200.00 cancellation fee.

Any class not having a minimum of ten registrants two weeks prior to the class may be cancelled and participants will be rescheduled to the next available class.*

All cancellations must be emailed to donna.olthoff@sielox.com.

About the Class Sessions

The training offers hands-on experience with no more than two persons per lab station. Each lab station consists of a stand-alone computer, Sielox controllers, wire, readers, cards, and tools for assembling components into a working access control system.

During the training, participants assemble the hardware and install and configure the software, so that, when they are done, they have working Sielox Access Control systems. The hands-on experience prepares participants to work with Pinnacle in the field.

Each participant must attend every class session.

Participants keep all the manuals, reference books, and handouts which they use in the class.

At the conclusion of the training, participants are tested. Those passing the test qualify as certified Sielox factory-trained technicians and will receive a certificate.

These courses and pricing are for Authorized Sielox Business Partner personnel only. Please contact us at info@sielox.com for further information on end user training classes.

Prerequisites

Sielox training is not training in using Windows. Persons with little or no experience using Windows will be at a disadvantage and are unlikely to retain learning. Basic typing skills and knowledge of the Windows keyboard are necessary. In addition, persons enrolling in the class should be able to do the following computer functions on a Windows computer:

Start and stop programs and select menu items and icons using the mouse.

Navigate a Windows screen using ALT-tab, tab, arrow, and hot keys.

Select, delete, copy, or edit text using the mouse and keyboard.

Find drives, folders (directories), and files using Windows Explorer.

Copy, delete, move, and rename files using Windows Explorer.

Drag and drop files and other objects to copy or move them using the mouse and Windows mouse conventions (CTRL-Click and SHIFT-Click).

Find a file using Windows Explorer from a path statement such as c:\winnt\system32\regsvr32.exe.

Locate and stop applications and processes using Windows Task Manager.

Open a Windows Command Window and change directories, rename files, delete files, and copy files using keyboard commands and the enter key.

Shut down the computer in an orderly fashion, using the Windows shutdown routine.

Distinguish between a client and a server computer in a Windows network.

Identify and describe the difference between a DOS-style path statement (for example, c:\winnt\system32\regsvr32.exe, that is, Drive:\folder\sub-folder\file) and a NETBIOS style path statement (for example, \\hornet\form, that is, \\Computer_Name\Shared_Folder).

Pre-course reading for participants in Pinnacle classes will be distributed approximately two weeks before the classes. The purpose of the pre-course reading is to help participants get the most out of their time in class; ensuring that this reaches the persons scheduled to attend class is essential.
